Commentary

In August the NAV per share was up 4.9%, the share price was up 3.4%, and the MSCI World Health Care Index was up 3.3%.

Positive returns in August were generated across the entire sector as healthcare stocks performed well across the globe. The lone exception was generic pharmaceutical stocks which bore witness to some profound weakness due to repeated negative earnings surprises in the month.

The top contributor in August was the medical device maker, Wright Medical. Investor concerns over a poor second quarter report proved unfounded as the company reported better than expected revenues and earnings. The stock rose and closed the month on its highs. Another top contributor in August was the global leader in diabetes medicines, the Denmark-based Novo Nordisk. Once again, investor concerns over a poor second quarter report proved unfounded as the company reported better than expected revenues and earnings and raised full-year guidance. The share price climbed further after the company reported positive Phase III data for semaglutide, the company's next generation diabetes offering. The data was superior to the current standard of care.

The worldwide leader in genetic analytics, Illumina, also suffered as a result of investor angst over the quarterly reporting period. But better than expected results saw the share price rise considerably higher.

Finally, from Japan, Nippon Shinyaku, was also a top contributor. The company has begun to receive more investor recognition for their global asset, Uptravi (selexipag), a best in class drug for the treatment of a deadly lung disease known as pulmonary arterial hypertension. The company's marketing partner, Actelion of Switzerland, was acquired by global pharma giant, Johnson and Johnson (JNJ). The acquisition closed this past quarter, allowing JNJ to report quarterly sales of Uptravi for the first time.

The only notable detractor in August was the generic drug maker, Mylan. The company's second quarter results were below market expectations as generic drug pricing in the U.S. has deteriorated, adversely affecting Mylan's reported revenues and margins, while delays to new product launches exacerbated the situation.
