Commentary

In January, the NAV per share was down 2.4%, the share price was down 3.0% and the MSCI World Health Care Index was down 0.9%.

A mostly positive start for global equities turned negative in late January as markets dropped precipitously at month end. Fears about the potential economic impact of the coronavirus capped a turbulent last week of the month, with global markets falling over 200 basis points in the last week alone, wiping out the gains made earlier in the month. Healthcare stocks were not defensive, and the benchmark index fell 90 basis points in January, whilst the broader market (MSCI) fell less than 10 basis points.

Broadly speaking, the underperformance in the month was primarily due to our exposure to biotechnology stocks, with approximately -250 basis points of detraction in January. Of note, the small and mid-cap biotech stock, Mirati Therapeutics, after a large run-up in December, sold off more than 30% in the month. A trifecta of negative headlines impacted the share price (competitor update, pipeline delay, no M&A). Biotechnology stocks in general sold off heavily into month end.

Some positive contribution in January came from non-therapeutic stocks. First, the online insurance provider, eHealth, pre-announced a very strong fourth quarter. And second, the insulin pump maker, Tandem Diabetes Care launched a new pump offering which boosted investor confidence about 2020 sales projections. Finally of note was the contribution from Chugai Pharmaceutical. The Japanese drug maker printed better than expected results for fourth quarter 2019 and guidance for 2020, pushing the stock to a new all time high in the month.

Looking ahead, we look for clarity on the global impact that the coronavirus outbreak may have on healthcare companies. Whilst some operational disruption may be seen in China for some of our portfolio companies, we expect any negatives to be mostly transient in nature. Moreover, we are eager to see the continued headlines coming out of the Democratic Primary election process in the U.S. which will be in full swing in February and March. A moderate candidate nominee could stimulate a rally in healthcare whilst a more left-wing candidate could bring some volatility on the group.

Shares bought back may be held in treasury for reissue at later dates at not more than the discount at which they were purchased, and in any event at a discount no greater than 5% to the prevailing cum income net asset value per share. Any shares left in treasury are cancelled around the time of the AGM. In order to stop the share price trading at a significant premium to the NAV per share, the Company has the ability to issue new shares at a 0.7% premium to the cum income NAV per share.

Worldwide Healthcare Trust PLC conducts its affairs so that its shares can be recommended by independent financial advisers ("IFAs") to retail private investors. The shares are excluded from the Financial Conduct Authority's ("FCA's") restrictions which apply to non-mainstream investment products because they are shares in a UK-listed investment trust.
