Investment Policy

The healthcare sector is global and accessing this market as a UK investor can be difficult. The Company offers an opportunity to gain exposure to pharmaceutical, biotechnology and related companies in the healthcare sector on a global scale. The Company invests in large companies with market capitalisations of over U.S.$10bn, smaller companies below that size, as well as unquoted companies. The portfolio ranges from large multinational pharmaceutical companies with multiple products to unquoted emerging biotechnology companies. The Company's investment policy allows gearing, through borrowing, of up to 20% of net assets and a net exposure to derivative investments (excluding swaps) of up to 5% of the portfolio. Equity swaps may also be used, counterparty exposure here is limited to 12% of the portfolio at the time of acquisition. Unquoted securities will not exceed 10% of the portfolio at the time of acquisition.

Commentary

In December, the NAV per share total return was -4.8%, the share price total return was -5.3% and the MSCI World Health Care Index was -4.5%, on a net total return, sterling adjusted basis.

Equity markets mostly stumbled to end 2024 and Santa Claus did not bring a rally as hoped. Healthcare underperformed the broader markets during the month, primarily stemming from the continued uncertainty created by the incoming Trump administration in the U.S., both in terms of policy and appointments. Some high profile clinical trial disappointments, and a challenging macro backdrop (notably decelerating interest rate cuts and rising yields), further exacerbated declines in healthcare stocks and diminished generalist interest in the sector in the near term.

Overall, performance was largely in-line with global healthcare equities. There were two notable exceptions. On the upside were Emerging Markets, in particular Jiangxi Rimag, a leading medical group specialized in medical imaging in China, providing an integrated business network centering around imaging center services, imaging solution services, and cloud services. Shares in the company continued to advance after its June 2024 IPO and were particularly strong in December, fueled by high retail interest and tight liquidity.

To the downside was Novo Nordisk. In late December, the company announced the long-awaited Phase III data for the company's next generation obesity medication known as CagriSema. Whilst the data was impressive at 23% weight loss from baseline for patients with BMI ≥30 (superior to Wegovy and perhaps marginally better than Eli Lilly's Zepbound), it was below the expected 25% weight loss anticipated by the company and investors. The stock fell by as much as 20% before partially recovering into month end. We viewed this move as excessive, driven more by positioning and sentiment in the crowded obesity space, rather than fundamentally driven. We await further details on this trial at a medical congress to better understand the totality of the data, nevertheless, we expect the company to push forward with a regulatory filing for CagriSema with an approval later this year or early next.

Looking ahead, the commencement of the second Trump administration will be carefully watched, especially through the lens of the healthcare industry. We were encouraged, however, about the multiple reports of recent constructive engagements between President Trump, Robert Kennedy Jr. and the CEOs of both Pfizer and Eli Lilly, among others. Additionally, the fourth quarter reporting period will begin in late January, where we hope that positive fundamentals of the industry can come back into focus for investors.

DISCOUNT/PREMIUM CONTROL

It is the Board's policy to buy back the Company's shares if the share price discount to the net asset value per share exceeds 6% on an ongoing basis. Shares repurchased are held as treasury shares. Treasury shares can be sold back to the market at a later date at a premium to the cum income net asset value per share. Shareholders should note, however, that it remains very possible for the discount to be greater than 6% for extended periods of time particularly when sentiment towards the Company, the sector and to investment trusts generally remains poor.

While buy backs may prove unable to prevent the discount from widening, they also enhance the net asset value per share for remaining shareholders and go some way to dampening discount volatility which can adversely affect investors' risk adjusted returns.

At times when there are unsatisfied buying orders for the Company's shares in the market, the Company has the ability to issue new shares or to re-issue treasury shares at a small premium to the cum income net asset value per share. This acts as an effective share price premium management tool.
