Commentary

In July the NAV per share was up 8.8%, the share price was up 11.2%, compared to the MSCI World Health Care Index which was up 4.9%.

The shock and awe of Brexit wore off quickly as global equity markets rebounded in July, reaching highs for the year. Portfolio outperformance was propelled by a positive contribution from all subsectors, in particular biotechnology, medical devices, pharmaceuticals, and life science tools. A common theme this month was stocks that outperformed due to better than expected quarterly financial results.

The top contributor in July was Exact Sciences, the cancer diagnostic company. The company's quarterly report beat investors' expectations and the stock rose more than 40%. Shares in orthopaedic device company, Wright Medical ran up in July on increased investor enthusiasm on two issues – quarterly financial results and lower litigation reserves.

An important contribution was generated by Regeneron Pharmaceuticals, a global biotechnology company. The share price appreciated in anticipation of solid quarterly results and steady progress in pipeline. The stock also benefited by a rotation into biotechnology in the month. Similarly, a positive contribution came from Biogen, another global biotechnology company. The shares moved higher due to better than expected quarterly financial results and market speculation on a potential take-out.

The only notable detractor in July was Ono Pharmaceutical. The stock came under pressure as speculation increased around a potential price cut in Japan for their leading drug, Opdivo (nivolumab), which will reach blockbuster status later this fiscal year.
